Sound Venture Awarded Prestigious Audio/Visual Contract For New Canadian War Museum

Neil Bregman, President of Sound Venture Productions, is pleased to announce that after an arduous competition, Sound Venture has been awarded the contract to produce all of the audio/visual exhibition components for the new Canadian War Museum, to be opened in May 2005.

“We are so proud to be associated with this prestigious new museum and to be a part of its historic activities”, says CEO Neil Bregman. “With our extensive background in producing historical and cultural subject matter for radio and television, we felt well-suited to execute this important work. It is an honour to be selected as a part of the team responsible for creating the public face of this important new cultural institution.”

Sound Venture will be responsible for creating and producing all of the audio, video and new media elements in the vastly expanded exhibition area of the new Museum. In total, there are over 150 new program components required to complete this task.

Quote from the War Museum....

Neil Bregman will act as Produce with partners Katherine Jeans (Creative Director) and Tim Joyce (Co-Producer). Pixelera Inc. will create and execute all of the new media components.

Sound Venture Productions is a 24-year old award-winning film and television production company specializing in the creation of high quality, cultural Canadian programming.
